The Women's International Art Club was founded in 1900 at a time when women artists had difficulty in exhibiting their work, and held its first exhibition in Paris in that year. Since then it has put on yearly exhibitions in London, and smaller selected exhibitions in the provinces and on the Continent. In spite of its name it is not in the strict sense a club, but an exhibiting society, whose members are elected on the strength of their work alone. This year a number of women artists, chosen by the Executive Committee, accepted our invitation to exhibit with a selection of the members. Their names are indicated by an asterisk in the catalogue.

I should like to express my gratitude to the Trustees of the Whitechapel Gallery for allowing this exhibition to take place. Especial thanks are due to Bryan Robertson for the interest he has shown, and to the staff of the Gallery for all the help they have given.

We are indebted to the Arts Council for their generous financial support.
