WIAC - 1968

Need for Women's International Art Club no longer quite clear.

68 years ago, when women were expected to have talents — but not genius — militant feminism saw Women Artists as a cause.

The 1900 exhibition — WIAC's inauguration in Paris — no doubt created a furore. Over half a century later, sex grouping in the arts should be an anachronism.

Yet doubts persist.

Maybe this is why selection of works for the annual exhibition of WIAC has become so tough and austere. It's no longer sufficient to wear a skirt whilst painting or sculpting — it is achievement that must speak for itself, not la différence.

But if the organisation's name is to retain its significance, there are still new obstacles to surmount.

For many years, the weighting of WIAC has been predominantly British; mainly artists born in Britain or working there. Despite the long-compounded victories of the feminists, countries remain where women fear to be associated with a group like WIAC because they are still hung up on the bias against women-in-the-arts and don't want to be branded with the amateur status of the apron and the oven. If International is to mean anything at all WIAC quality needs to be so identifiably high and well known that new members will be attracted from all over the world.

WIAC's exhibition this year has been greatly enhanced through the hard work of the Committee, the continuing support of the Arts Council of Great Britain, and the generosity of Halima Nalecz who has placed her Drian Galleries at the disposal of the organisation.

I am personally grateful to Mr. A. F. C. Turner and the members of the selection committee for making my part in all this so agreeable.

I hope that you will enjoy the exhibition.
